Rod Nadeau

Nadeau and Associates
*(winner of the 2004
Georgie Award for
"Best R-2000 Builder of the year" and
"Best Single Family Home valued at $1,000,000+")*

Built in 2004 in Whistler, B.C., the Envirohome (The Healthy Home) focused on the use of environmentally friendly and low maintenance building materials. In his detailed study of cost savings associated with the design and construction of the home, Rod reported that by using EuroLine windows and doors in his $1,000,000+ home, over a 30-year period there would be a savings of an estimated $96,000 in maintenance, repair and replacement costs over ordinary windows - these savings representing more than the original purchase price. Rod said, "I had no idea these upscale windows were so price competitive when compared to a quality wood window system. In addition to providing superior insulation benefits, the windows and doors are virtually maintenance free, UV resistant and will never rot, split, warp, chalk, fade, yellow or grow brittle with age. These are the most environmentally-friendly windows I have ever seen. They're also one of the few systems with a true pressure-equalized rainscreen design."

Peter Stack

Cathedral Homes

"I have had nothing but compliments from trades and potential buyers alike on how good the windows look from the inside and the outside of the house. Any buyer can see the quality in the windows and understands that a builder that goes to such lengths takes pride in their homes. Cathedral Homes is no different. The product sells itself and sets the benchmark for the development. I'll use your windows again not only for how good they look but also for how good they make me look. I now look at other windows, as do my buyers in this energy-conscious and quality-conscious marketplace, from an entirely different perspective and know I'll continue to use your windows. They cost more and they are worth it. By the way, I did sell my current house and the windows played a significant role in the sale. Any home seems to sell today, however, if a builder wants to build a product that will stand up to the test of time - EuroLine Windows is the way to go."

"I am writing to express my appreciation for the high quality of the French doors that you installed at my house in Beach Grove last September.

As you probably know, there was some serious flooding in the area on Saturday, February 4th, 2006. The spray from Boundary Bay inundated our patio area in the front of our house and the only barrier between the inside of our house and the water was the set of French doors. As a result of the quality of the construction of those doors, no water at all entered our house and it simply flowed around both sides of the house and out to the street. We are grateful that we were so fortunate as there were many homes on our street that suffered from considerable water damage from the flooding. Thank you again".

Sean Hodgins, VP Operations, The Century Group said: "We replaced all our high-maintenance wooden windows in our B & B with EuroLine windows that are virtually maintenance free. We chose their EuroWood acrylic foil laminate finish. Guests still find it hard to believe they are not looking at, and touching, real wood".

Home builder David Bradley reports that he once received a phone call from an owner of one of his upscale South Surrey homes. A would-be burglar unsuccessfully tried to drill out the key entry of a EuroLine patio door - not realizing that EuroLine windows have multi-point locking hardware. The burglar then made an unsuccessful attempt to gain entry through the window using a crow bar - not realizing that EuroLine window frames and sashes are steel reinforced. When the intruder used the crow bar on a third unsuccessful attempt to gain entry, the window seal was broken, setting off the alarm. Says David Bradley about EuroLine Windows, "Congratulations! You've got one exceptional window and door system that can really take a beating and still keep performing. I've never seen anything like it!"
